CADWALADER

A Good Time to Concentrate

August 26, 2022 | Issue No. 190

Table of Contents:

- Concentrate on Debt Limits
- 'Fund Finance Friday: Industry Conversations' — LIBOR Before Labor Day (2022 Edition)
- FFA NextGen Career Podcast
- Brickfield Thought Leadership on NAV Hiring
- Fund Fanatics Episode with Lead Edge Capital's Mitchell Green
- Cadwalader Welcomes New FF Team Members

Concentrate on Debt Limits

August 26, 2022 | Issue No. 190

By Tim Hicks
Partner | Fund Finance

A common feature included in credit agreements is a limitation on the amount of the unfunded capital commitment of a single investor (or the aggregate unfunded capital commitments of a class of investors) that can be included in the calculation of the borrowing base on any date of determination. Such feature serves to protect a lender against too great of an exposure to a single investor (or class of investors) and better ensures that the borrowing base is comprised of a diversified pool of unfunded capital commitments. In the early stages of fundraising, the investor pool may be limited in number and largely comprised of a short list of anchor investors. The application of a concentration limit can significantly diminish the calculation of the borrowing base under these circumstances. As such, borrowers often ask that the application of concentration limits commence on a predetermined date after closing the facility or, in the most lenient of circumstances, after the borrower has completed fundraising. Depending on the composition of the investors at closing and based on expected future investors in the borrower, a lender may be willing to accommodate this request. However, this compromise has led some lenders to take a closer look at the debt limitations to be imposed on a borrower during the "concentration limit holiday."

The limitation on indebtedness covenant in a credit agreement often includes a cross reference to the requirements and limitations on indebtedness set forth in the applicable partnership agreement. Those limitations often set the maximum amount of indebtedness that a borrower can incur as a percentage of aggregate capital commitments. Although that percentage may vary from partnership agreement to partnership agreement, it is often applicable to any indebtedness incurred under a subscription credit facility.

In exchange for temporarily waiving concentration limits, we have seen lenders impose a tighter limitation on the incurrence of indebtedness than is otherwise in the partnership agreement during the period in which the concentration limits do not apply. The rationale for imposing such a debt limitation is that the lender has a greater exposure to a single investor based on that investor's uncalled capital commitment comprising a greater portion of the borrowing base than the lender would otherwise prefer. As a result, the lender would like to limit the overall amount of indebtedness that the borrower may incur until the investor pool is more diverse and the concentration limits are applied. The extent of that limitation varies from deal to deal, but this remains a consideration at the structuring stage where the investor base is expected to be highly concentrated for a period of time after closing.

'Fund Finance Friday: Industry Conversations' — LIBOR Before Labor Day (2022 Edition)

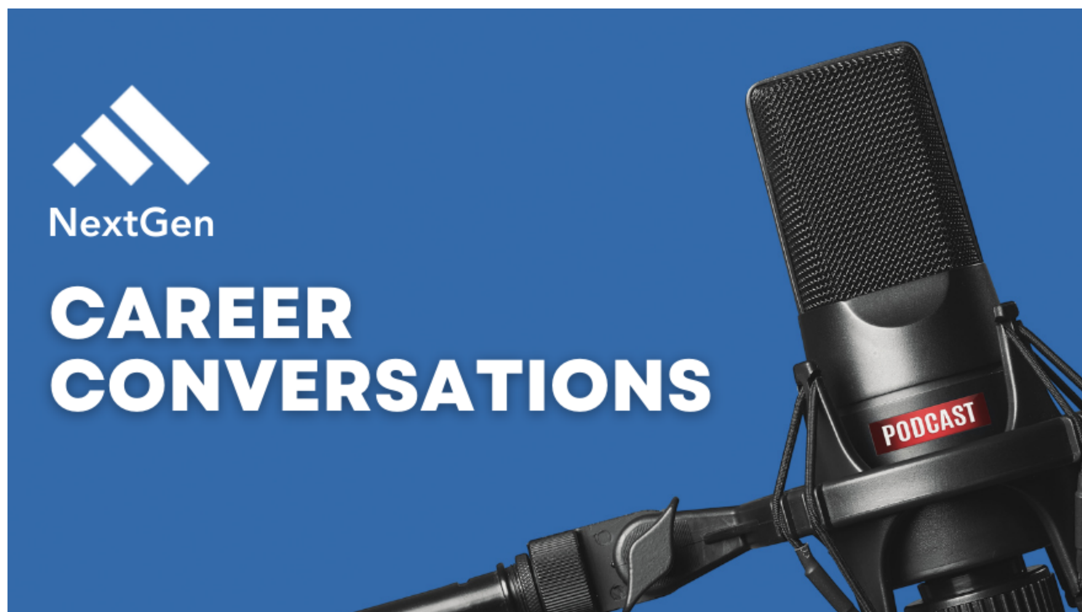
August 26, 2022 | Issue No. 190

Cadwalader partner Jeff Nagle discusses the latest in LIBOR transition in another installment of FFF: Industry Conversations. Jeff is a leading authority on LIBOR reform and emerging benchmark regulation. He serves as counsel to the Federal Reserve's Alternative Reference Rates Committee (ARRC) and is working to guide the post-LIBOR financial world in best practices for the transition. He is also counsel to the Loan Syndications and Trading Association (LSTA) with respect to the transition.

If you cannot access the video above, please click here to watch.

FFA NextGen Career Podcast

August 26, 2022 | Issue No. 190



Looking to expand your professional toolbox? The Fund Finance Association's podcast, "Career Conversations," can help you do just that. Listen to different industry leaders in each episode as they recount how they navigated their careers. These quick and convenient episodes highlight career mistakes, lessons learned, and advice for the "NextGen" of the fund finance industry. Regardless of where you are in your career, the invaluable takeaways from these episodes will help you hone the pursuit of both your personal and professional goals. Tune in here!

Brickfield Thought Leadership on NAV Hiring

August 26, 2022 | Issue No. 190

As many of you are already aware, Brickfield Recruitment's long-anticipated Fund Finance Banker's Compensation Report arrives next month. In the meantime, this article with market commentary on hiring in the NAV market just posted on Brickfield's website and is a must-read for anyone operating in the space or considering a move towards NAV specialization. And register here to receive your PDF edition of the Brickfield Fund Finance Banker's Compensation Report in September.

Fund Fanatics Episode with Lead Edge Capital's Mitchell Green

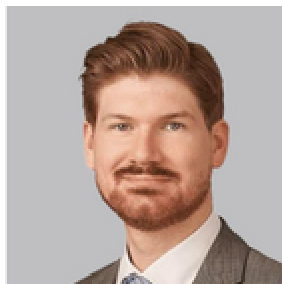
August 26, 2022 | Issue No. 190

Tune in to the recent episode of Fund Fanatics for a hot take on the latest private market trends and forecasts with Mitchell Green, Founder of Lead Edge Capital.

Cadwalader Welcomes New FF Team Members

August 26, 2022 | Issue No. 190

Spencer Davies



Justin Larson

We are very pleased to announce that associates Spencer Davies and Justin Larson have joined our Fund Finance team in Charlotte and New York, respectively.

Spencer received his J.D. from Vanderbilt University Law School, while Justin received his J.D. from Osgoode Hall Law School.

Welcome, Spencer and Justin!